

M'GOVERN PLANS TO READ MESSAGE

WILL PERSONALLY ADDRESS
BOTH HOUSES OF LEGISLA-TURE ON THURSDAY.

OTHER NEWS FROM CAPITOL

Dev. Daniel Woodward of Omro Will Be Appointed Member of Board of Control—New System of Reports.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 9.—Gov. Mc-Govern will personally read his message to the legislature next Thursday.
He has just come to this decision
after some deliberations, and for reasons known only to himself. The reading will probably commence at noon
on Thursday in the assembly chamber,
with both houses present in joint session, the same as for the election of a United States senator.

That Rev. Daniel Woodward of Omro, whose speechmaking activity in behalf of Gov. McGovern during the latter's campaign cost him his pastorate
of the Methodist church in that city, will be appointed as a member of the board of control, now seems certain.

Mr. Woodward is now pastor of a Congregational church in Omro, which he formed after the Methodist church closed here, and his congregation is said to be exceptionally large, containing many of his former flock.

It is said that Mr. Woodward prefers a place which will not interfere with his church duties, and about the only one of that kind within the gift of the government is on the board of control.

Deals For Assemblymen.
Laborers of the capitol force are busy today unloading a consignment of new steel desks to be used by the members of the assembly at the coming session. One carload arrived late Saturday and another one is due some time today. Sent. of Public Property Examiners is confident that the chamber of the lower house will be ready for the opening of the session on Wednesday.

The new desks are a distinct improvement over the historic furniture hitherto used and are slightly smaller than the old ones. They are flat-topped, with sunken pigeonholes in which papers are to be placed on end, all of which can be covered and locked
by a steel panel that drops back out of sight when the desks are in use.

The old desks will be used in the senate, which will be housed in the quarters formerly occupied by the senators. Carpenters are now busy transforming the old courtrooms, library
and consultation rooms into a senate chamber, offices and committee rooms for the members.

System Of Reports.
A comprehensive system of reports,
by which the civil service commission will be able to follow intelligently the progress of state employees in the various branches of the service, is being worked out by Secretary P. E.
Doty of the commission. Such a system, although not yet perfected to the highest possible point, is already used in several state institutions, but the plan now followed cannot be adapted to the entire service. It is to this end that Mr. Doty is now laboring.

The system which the commissioner's secretary now has in mind would provide cards or sheets, properly indexed, which would for instance, show
the number of reprimands given each employee, together with the reasons for each reprimand. The effect of such releases also would be shown by the manner in which they were followed by greater industry and faithfulness
to duty of further laxity in the observance of rules.

The working out of the proposed system is a slow process, and Mr. Doty finds only occasional time to devote to it.

Members of the legislature continued to arrive at the capitol today preparatory to the opening of the general assembly Wednesday. As the senate chambers are not yet in chaotic condition as the result of repairs, it is probable the hearing of the governor's message Thursday will be the only work done during the present week. An adjournment until early next week is expected Thursday.

IMPORTANT DECISION EXPECTED TOMORROW

State Supreme Court to Give Finding in Case Involving Collection of Municipal Court Fines.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 9.—A momentous decision is expected from the state supreme court in the case involving the collection of $220,742.48 alleged to be due from fines collected for milwaukee county up to a few years ago and running back to nearly half a century. The case came to the supreme court upon an order of the circuit court sustaining the state's demand that the status of limitations
make it impossible to go back farther than ten years in prosecuting the claim.
The court's decision probably will affect only this question regarding the statute of limitations, but this at least will determine the amount for which the state can sue.

The discovery that the money was probably due the state was made when
H. C. Comstock was claim agent for Governor La Follette, and the facts
made known to the attorney general's office. Just before he went out of office, Attorney General Sturdevant began the litigation, which was continued during the two terms of Attorney General Gilbert.

Even after the supreme court disposed of the question involving the statute of limitations, the case doubtless will go back to the lower court
for trial on its merits.

PORTUGUESE CAUSED CLERICALS TROUBLE

Influx Into Rome Has Given Anti-Clericals Their Opportunity to Act.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Rome, Jan. 9.—The recent influx of priests expelled from Portugal is threatening trouble for the religious orders already established in Rome.
What makes the anti-clerical position strong is that the constitution allows no religious institutions in the Italian capital. The law, however, has never been strictly enforced, and there are at present 230 congregations domiciled here, not counting the 368 churches of the numerous colleges for the education of priests.

No serious objection was raised to this condition until the Portuguese exiles began pouring in. Then there was a protest and this protest called attention to the already prevailing situation. The anti-clericals have compiled figures showing that one-fifth of the entire population of the Holy City is engaged in religious work and demanding what the law against religious establishments is for if not for enforcement.

grimly to the side of a speeding car,
in which his household goods and five stock were being consumed by fire, H. M. Brown of Koshongong, Ill., was rescued by trainmen on the Milwaukee road after a thrilling ride through cold and darkness between Pewaukee and this city, early today.
Three horses were burned to death,
and all the man's household goods destroyed. He was all but exhausted when the engineer discovered the flames bursting from the car and stopped the train. The blaze started when one of the horses kicked over a lighted lantern. Brown was moving from his Illinois home to Manitowish Wish.

Efficient Northcott Chosen Nicaraguan Minister and F. M. Gunther As-

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9.—President Taft today nominated Elliott North-cott to be minister to Nicaragua, Franklin Mott Gunther, to be secretary to the American legation in Managua.

Northcott is now minister to Columbia. His appointment to the Nicaraguan post is regarded as a promotion and comes as a result of his successful management of the negotiations concerning the sale of the United States railway company, an American owned corporation to the municipality of Bogota. This railway was the cause of plots and anti-American demonstrations in Bogota last summer. He is a native of Clarkburg, W. Va.

Gunther is a resident of Amherst,
Va. He is a graduate of Harvard and entered the diplomatic service in 1909 when he was private secretary to the embassy in Tokio. He was made third secretary to the Paris embassy
in 1909.

Minister Northcott and Gunther will depart for Managua about Jan. 20. Their arrival will mark the complete resumption of diplomatic relations with Nicaragua.

POISONING CASES WERE BEGUN TODAY

Mrs. Schenck on Trial Charged With Attempt On Husband's Life.
Speeds Murder Suspects Arraigned.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 9.—Not in many years has a criminal case in this city attracted the attention that manifested in the case of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenck, which came up for trial in court today. Mrs. Schenck is charged with attempting to poison
her husband, John O. Schenck, a millionaire brewer. Various interesting rumors are in circulation in regard to the case, one of them is the effect that the trial is not likely to proceed owing to the probable refusal of the husband to testify against his wife.

Another report has it that the proceedings will end in Mrs. Schenck being found of unsound mind and sent to a sanatorium.

Women on Trial.
Newark, N. J., Jan. 9.—After delays and postponements extending over a year, caused chiefly by the judicial inquiry into the sanity of Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, the prospects are bright for an early end of the so-called Snead murder case. In the Essex County court the case of Mrs. Martin, and her sister, Mrs. Mary W. Snead, who was indicted jointly for the alleged murder of Mrs. Martin's daughter, in a bath in a house in East Orange,
in November, 1908, was called up today, and it is expected the trial will proceed without further delay.

ORGANIZATION OF PARTY EFFECTED

Minnesota Progressives Arranged For Permanent Committee To Handle All Affairs
Of Party.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 9.—With La Follette men at the helm, the permanent organization committee of the progressive republicans, who Wednesday met in convention here for the purpose of enunciating their principles and giving voice to the discontent
they feel with conditions existing in the Republican party, met Saturday night in the West Hotel for the purpose of devising ways and means of encompassing permanent organization
in every county of the state.

It is part of the program that the best methods of accomplishing this is to organize in every county of the state, and to have a general committee composed of every delegate from each county and 14 at large. This will make a committee of 101 from whose ranks there will be chosen a committee of nine, one from each congressional district, to be known as the executive committee and upon whose shoulders shall rest the detail
work.

It is no longer a secret that one of the reasons for the launching of the movement at this time is to endeavor to capture the Minnesota delegation to the 1912 republican national convention for Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. One of the methods by which this can be accomplished,
it is believed, is through an amended primary law which will compel not only candidates for all state offices
but those who wish to go as delegates to that convention to go before the people.

REPORT IS DELAYED BY HUSTING ABSENCE

Stephenscn Investigation Committee
Will Have A Very Lengthy Report To Make.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 9.—Owing to the non-arrival this morning of Senator Paul Husting of Mayville, who is denying the subject matter of the report of the special senate committee which investigated Senator Isaac Stephenscn's election, two years ago,
and the preparation of the report has been delayed and the senator and his stenographers will have to work almost night and day to get it ready in time for the opening of the legislature.

This is necessary because Senator Spencer Marsh who was chairman of the committee, will come to be a senator when his successor takes up his duties, and then there will no longer be a majority of the old committee to sign the report. Lieut. Governor Morris, the third member is not now a senator.

The report will be over 150 typewritten pages, about two thirds of which has been dictated to the stenographers.
It is now expected that it will not be finished before late Wednesday night.
Its contents are not yet public and it is still a sealed book.

OHIO'S GOVERNOR INAUGURATED TODAY

Judson Harmon Took Oath Of Office
For Second Time As Executive
Of Ohio—Extreme Simplicity.

Columbus, O., Jan. 9.—Judson Harmon was inaugurated Governor of Ohio today for the second time, with severe Jeffersonian simplicity. The ceremony was one of the simplest in history of the state. The governor stepping out from his private office into the reception room of executive chambers and there subscribing to the oath. The parade, the social receptions, the inaugural ball and inaugural address and other customary incidents of an inauguration of governor were omitted. The omission of inaugural address made Harmon's inauguration unprecedented. As far as known the governors of Ohio have always made address after inauguration, outlining their policies. Most of the democratic officials entered upon their duties today.

AVERT CRISIS IN FINANCIAL WORLD BY PROMPT WORK

J. P. Morgan Comes To Aid With His Millions To Restore Confidence.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

New York, Jan. 9.—Though many firms of the allied banking institutions of the country, especially in New York, were placed in jeopardy by failure of the Carnegie Trust Saturday,
at the opening of business today there was an exhibition of immediate resources in every institution which might have unusual demands upon it.
J. P. Morgan's influence for the first time since 1907 brought about this condition.

Run On, One Bank.

Sunday to restore confidence in institutions that were connected in various ways with the Carnegie Trust affairs

day by brisk and heavy buying causing a firm to strong tone at the opening. Fractional advances were established in many leading issues.

At noon the run on the Nineteenth ward bank abated. At that time there was $1,300,000 on the counters. It was officially announced that J. P. Morgan had guaranteed an additional eight million dollars if needed.

MINORITY REPORT ON LORIMER CASE WAS GIVEN TODAY

States That Far More Than Enough Bribery Was Practiced To Invalidate His Election.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9.—Senator
Beveridge today submitted to the senate the minority report from the committee on privileges and election, which declared that testimony was conclusive that "far more than enough bribery was practiced to" invalidate
the election over Lorimer.

Senator Beveridge holds that if only one case of bribery was clearly established it "makes the whole election
a foul."

After the morning business Senator
Owen gained the floor and delivered his speech against Lorimer.
Senator Owen introduced a resolution to declare the election of Senator Lorimer illegal and void, but he was outvoted by a majority of the senate.
The senate will hold the vote
over until tomorrow.

Senator Beveridge then submitted
his report in full, which included:
"That this election was invalid under any possible view of the law. If the senate so includes then it is our duty to declare. There, I submit the following: 'Resolved, that Lorimer was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the United States senate by the legislature of Illinois.'"

Before the report was filed Senator Lorimer made a brief speech, declaring his innocence of any bribery
and the innocence of his friends.

FIRST BLOOD GOES TO SPEAKER CANNON

House Sustains His Decision Despite Work of the Insurgent Members.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9.—There was a hot fight over the rules between Cannon and his opponent this afternoon.

In ruling on a resolution by Congressman Fuller of Illinois, the speaker held the action by the house last spring when his power was broken by the Norris resolution, "was not a precedent but a revolution," an appeal was taken from the chair. The house sustained the speaker. The insurgent republicans voted to overrule the speaker, but got little support from the democrats.

RECOMMENDS MUCH NEW LEGISLATION

State Fire Marshal Purcell Expresses
His Views on Question Of Fires.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Madison, Jan. 9.—Recommending
the enactment of much legislation pending, tending to hold Wisconsin's fire losses to a minimum, State Fire Marshal Purcell today filed his annual report with the governor. The report suggested laws be passed requiring the teaching of chemistry of fire in the public schools and plans for coping with all fire dangers. That the state building code be adopted, and strictly enforced in all cities, is also recommended. Heavy penalties for carelessness in relation to fire recommendations in the common council of the cities throughout the state, prohibiting the sale of fireworks, and a heavier penalty for persons convicted of arson, were among other recommendations. The report showed the total loss by fire during the past year had been $400,000 under the former year.

Sign Posts for Aviators.
A German aeronaut has devised a system of orientation which will help the German aviator, at least, in finding his way through the air. Each German province is provided with a number, and every community is provided with a letter. A guide book to be carried by the aviator contains a list of provinces and towns similarly designated. Thus, if an aviator sees the character "40 A" painted upon the roof of a house in Rheineau he knows immediately where he is by referring to his book. At night these signs are to be illuminated. The system is now actually being installed in Germany.

Enthusiasm in Your Work.

Do not look on your work as a dull duty. If you choose you can make it interesting. Throw your heart into it, master its meaning, trace out the causes and previous history, consider it in all its bearings, think how many even the humblest labor may benefit, and there is scarcely one of our duties which we may not look to with enthusiasm. You will get to love your work, and if you do it with delight, you will do it with ease. Even if at first you find this impossible, if for a time it seems more drudgery, this may be just what you require; it may be good like mountain air to brace up your character.—Lord Avebury.

Passed the Examination.

Miss Francis A. Kellor was made chief investigator of the labor department of the state of New York, having been instrumental to a large extent in creating the bureau. But it was necessary that she pass the civil service examination before she could be regularly appointed. This she did, and while 30 of the applicants were men, she passed the best examination, and consequently earned the right to the new position.

To Those Who Pay in Advance.

BAD CHIMNEY FIRE AT THE BLUNK HOME LAST EVENING.

Bricks Were Red Hot and Firemen did Not Dare Use Chemicals in Extinguishing It.

One of the worst chimney fires which the fire department has had to fight in years broke out last night at the home of Henry Blunk, 335 No. Jackson street. The blaze was discovered about 7:45, but no attempt was made by the department to extinguish it with the use of chemicals as the bricks of the chimney were red hot and to have done so would have caused the brickwork to split the entire length. Instead the energies of the firemen were devoted to cleaning the accumulation of soot and removing the cause of the blaze. The bricks cooled without any particular damage being done.

Janesville Lodge No. 55, F. & A. M., will meet in regular communication this evening at 7:30 p. m. Work in F. C. degree. Visiting brethren invited.

Changed His Taste.

The Emperor Eugenie, whom Napoleon III. chose to share his throne, had a ready wit, which, although it never failed a miser, often confused those on whom it was directed. The late Dr. T. W. Evans tells in his reminiscences the story of a distinguished scientist, who, on being asked what he thought of the speech in which Napoleon had declared his marriage intention to the deputies, replied:

"A fine speech—excellent! But I prefer the sauce to the fish," meaning that Napoleon's words were better than his choosing of a bride.

Some weeks later, at a dinner given at the Tuilleries, this senator was seated next to the empress, who, observing that after having been helped to the turbot he declined the sauce, said to him, smiling roguishly:

"Monsieur, I thought it was the sauce you liked and not the fish."

With some presence of mind the senator hesitated but a moment.

"A mistake, madam," he said, "for which I am now trying to make amends."

The Corner Days.

Some aged country folk like to take note of what they call the corner days—the 20th of March and the 20th of September—when the sun crosses the line and the days and nights are of equal length and the 20th of June (the longest day of the year) and the 20th of December (the shortest). After the 20th of June they say, "When the days grow shorter the weather grows hotter," and after Dec. 20, "As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen."

Levi Heber, a noted old weather prophet, who used to watch the weather from his eyrie on Hartown mountain, southern Berkshire, Mass., made prophecies which were greatly prized. He made his prognostications from a study of the winds, the clear, cloudy and stormy days for ten days each side of the corner days and multiplied them by 3 to tell the weather for such succeeding quarter, and he made some marvelous guesses.—New York Press.

Before and After.

The career of every successful man may be divided into two periods; first, when he is not given credit for what he knows, and second, when he is given credit for what he doesn't know.—Life.

He Won't Like It There.

The man who isn't satisfied with good health and a steady job will find even a disappointing place.

Time and the team.
Some one may suggest that if Cromwell and Napoleon Bonaparte and Bismarck and George Washington and Abraham Lincoln had not appeared to do the work they did others would have arisen equally capable of doing it, though perhaps in a different way. To this suggestion there are two answers. One is that it is pure conjecture. The other answer is that history shows us many occasions when the great man was needed, and when the need of him was acutely felt, and yet when he did not appear. The greatness of some men is largely due to favoring conditions. Other men, perhaps more brilliant, achieve less than their powers seemed to promise because they were not quite in key with their own age. Perhaps they were ahead of it.—James Bryce in Pall Mall Gazette.

Great Events From Little Causes.

While staying at the court of Frederick II. of Prussia Voltaire presented Mme. de Pompadour's compliments to the king, who scornfully replied, "No no la comode pas!" Out of vengeance for so much insult, as she deemed it, madame induced the weak-minded Louis XV. to convert his country's long standing hostility against Austria into friendship. A Franco-Austrian army then took the field against Prussia, and as it was an easy matter for madame to enlist the practical sympathy of Elizabeth of Russia, who had been the subject of Frederick's indelicate remarks also, half a million lives were lost.—London Notes and Queries.

Consolation.

Wife of Belated Fox-Hunter—"Oh, Perkins, what do you think can have happened to Mr. John? Surely, if he's been thrown and hurt the mare would have found her way home by now?" Coachman—"Oh, no mum—a nice gentle animal like 'er would have browed round the body until it was found."—Punch.

Life-Saving Service for Miners.

The inauguration of a life-saving service for the rescue of miners in time of disaster is one of the first steps taken by the new Bureau of Mines. Recently six specially constructed cars, manned by a corps of miners trained in rescue work and equipped with the latest rescue apparatus and first aid to the injured appliances, have been sent to the mining districts.

The saving of human life will be the emergency feature of a general campaign of educational work among the miners, who will not only be taught the use of the rescue apparatus, but also the proper way to take care of an injured miner. There will also be lectures on many phases of the mining problem.

Development of Petrology.

Accurate chemical analyses of rocks and of the component minerals of rocks have become increasingly important in the modern development of petrology. The discovery of new rock types is continually providing fresh material and demonstrating that the older rock analyses no longer suffice for the requirements of the present day. In this work a leading part has been taken by American chemists, and particularly those of the United States geological survey. In the last thirteen years four bulletins have been issued, giving complete analyses of many American rocks, conducted in the laboratory at Washington.

In Modest Circumstances.

Benora Braga, wife of the new president of Portugal, says that she is proud of her husband, but at the same time is sorry for anything that will break up their happy little home. They lost two children many years ago and since then the president and his wife have been very much dependent upon one another. They will still keep their one-story little house, overlooking the Tagus, until such time as they may return to it again.

"Monte Cristo" was playing to a crowded house in a New York theater. In a box sat a man who had looked on the wine when it was red. When Monte mounted the rock in the sea and exclaimed, "The world is mine!" the man in the box shouted: "What'll you take for Hoboken?"

FOUND GUILTY BUT GIVEN NEW TRIAL

William Adler, New Orleans Banker
Will Again Be Tried For Misappropriating Bank's

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New Orleans, La., Jan. 8.—William A. Adler, whose checkered experiences in finance have kept him prominently in the public eye for several years past, will be tried in the United States circuit court here this week on a charge of misappropriating the funds of the State Bank of New Orleans, of which he was president. Just prior to the collapse of the bank some two years ago Adler fled from New Orleans on an old fruit steamer, the Alps, which he had loaded with a full cargo of provisions from the Adler wholesale grocery company. The steamer was wrecked off the coast of Honduras and Adler narrowly escaped death, but finally got safely ashore. In Honduras he was said to have recouped his fallen fortunes by means of mining properties and other ventures before he was located by the authorities and returned to New Orleans to stand trial on an indictment found against him after the bank had closed. He was tried a year ago and convicted, but the appellate court granted him a new trial. Several weeks ago the Federal grand jury returned a new indictment against him containing charges similar to those in the first indictment, namely, misappropriating the funds of the bank.

GOVERNORS INAUGURATED IN TWO STATES TODAY

Oklahoma and Oregon Usher In Terms
For Their New Executives With Ceremony Today.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 8.—Before a large and representative assemblage that included members of the legislature, state officials, the judiciary and many influential citizens, Lee Cruise of Ardmore was today sworn into office as the second governor of the state of Oklahoma, succeeding Charles N. Haskell.

The inauguration ceremony took place at noon and were followed by a public reception.

Governor Cruise, in assuming the duties of governor today took occasion to defend the constitution of this state, branded, he said, by its enemies as radical, even vicious.

He declared the constitution is a condensation into a single instrument of the best and most vital provisions to be found in the forty-five other state constitutions. He also pointed out the unexampled growth of the state under this constitution.

Oregon Has Democrat.

Salem, Ore., Jan. 8.—The inauguration of Governor Oswald West as chief executive of the State of Oregon today was attended by the pagantry and pomp which are usually made a part of the ceremonies on the occasion of the administration of the formal oath of office to the first magistrate of the Commonwealth.

New York.—The new famous experiment by which J. A. D. McCurdy endeavored to prove that an aeroplane can take from the deck of a steamship for out at sea and make a successful flight to land was attempted recently.

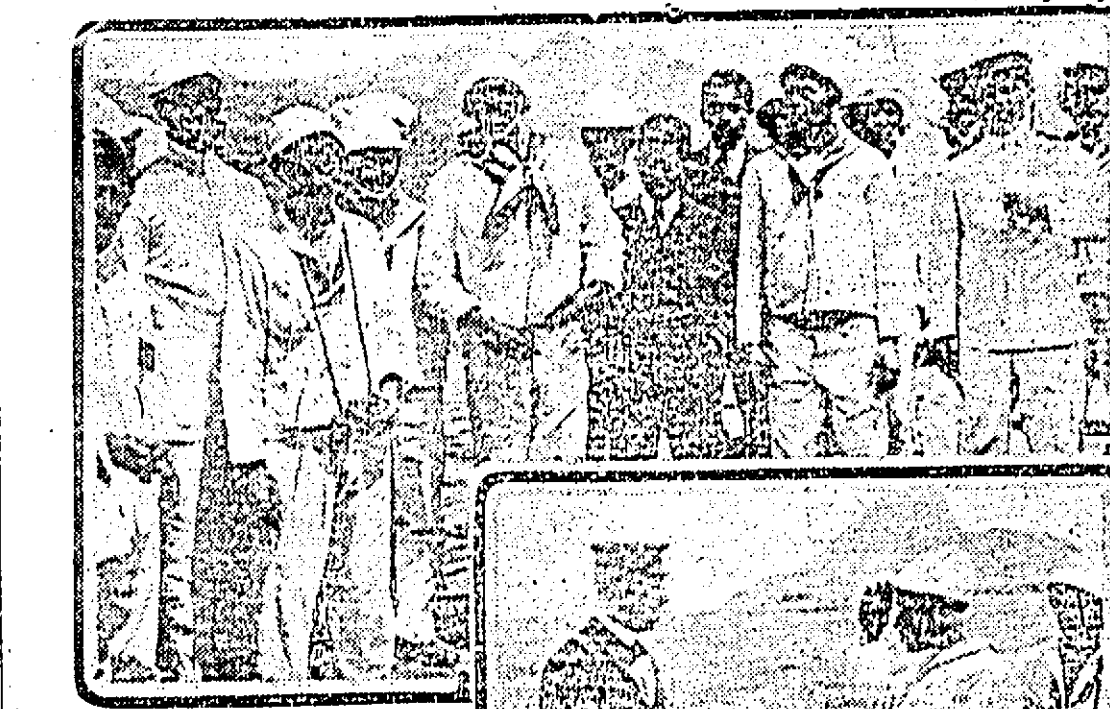

To patrol the course and in order to provide the best accommodations for the official observers and guests for the official observers and guests.

An arrangement was made with L. B. do Pero by which his steam yacht, the Wild Duck was at their disposal for the day.

Plans contemplated that the Wild Duck be in a ship adjoining that of the Pennsylvania and convenient for the guests to go on board after inspecting the aeroplane and its launching platform. As the yacht is somewhat slower than the steamer it was necessary for her to leave an hour or so earlier in order to be at the rendezvous at the appointed time.

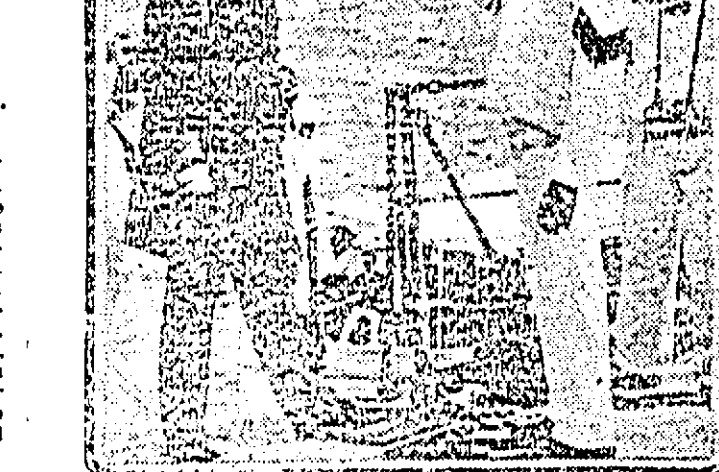

Invitations were issued to Rear Admiral Leuze, commandant of the New York Navy Yard; to Major General Grant, commanding the department of the East and to about a score of other army and navy officers.

Invitations were also sent to an equal number of civilians who are known to be interested in aeroplanes and in army or navy enterprises.

THE PRIMARY LAW.

That the primary law is not a pamphlet for all political life, has been discovered by the people of Missouri,
where the law has been in force for the past two years, as will be seen by the following dispatch to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, under date of December 30, 1910.

"The state primary law is likely to undergo radical amendments at the hands of the legislature this winter.
Governor Hadley, in his message, will recommend important changes, and the democratic majority in the general assembly may have others.

"The governor said tonight that the law has not proved the panacea for political life that was hoped for in 1908.
However, under the law, he says, still are important factors in shaping up
the tickets of the respective parties.

He finds, also, that the voters pay little attention to candidates below that of governor, and vote largely at random for all others, as the two elections held under the law indicate.

"The weak feature of the Missouri law, the governor says, lies in the fact that where a great number of candidates are to be ballotted upon the voters either are unable or do not attempt to acquaint themselves with the respective merits of the candidates seeking nomination.

"One plan suggested by the governor is to have the political parties hold conventions prior to the primary and by ballot select candidates for the primary ballots. The names, he says, should go upon the ballots in the order of the number of votes each received in the convention. This would furnish a fitting process and hold down the number of candidates for any office. He says there should be a provision for candidates who receive no votes in the convention to get their names on the ballots by petition.

"The governor is not in favor of the repeal of the law.

"Thousands of voters at the two elections held under the law voted for the candidate whose name headed the list of candidates for any one office.
To obviate this the forty-fifth general assembly attempted to amend the law providing for alternating the names of candidates on the ballot, but this failed, except as applied to the larger cities."

The primary law is a sure and destitution. It encourages boresdom by normalizing purities for the benefit of individuals. It humiliates candidates by compelling them to become office-seekers, and then bankrupts them in their efforts to win.

The average voter knows so little about candidates for state office, that he declines to vote, and as a result,
bosses control the situation, and a zealous minority following do their bidding to the extent of voting for dead men when occasion requires.
The state of Missouri will do well to discard the law.

COST OF HIGH LIVING.

The demand for the luxuries of life
is always an index of prosperity, and the following figures from the Bureau of Statistics, indicates very clearly that the year 1910 was one of the most prosperous in the history of the country.

"In years of marked depression, 1894 and 1896, for example, the value
of diamonds and other precious stones imported dropped from $16,000,000 in 1893 to $5,500,000 in 1894, $7,500,000 in 1895 and about $6,750,000 in 1896;
gradually moving upward again until 1899 and 1900 and reaching a total of $32,000,000 in 1903 and $42,000,000 in 1907. In the fiscal year 1908, a year of business depression, the total fell to $16,750,000, returning to $29,000,000
in 1909 and $48,000,000 in the fiscal year 1910, while the figures of the calendar year will not materially differ
from those of the fiscal year.

"The figures of diamond importations above cited are merely an example of the evidences of prosperity supplied by the figures of imports. In automobiles, art works, lace, feathers, decorated china and numerous other articles named in the list of importations, the figures of 1910 are large, and the importation of articles
usually classed as 'luxuries' will show
a total of between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 value. Of lace and embroideries alone the value imported during the year just ended approximated $45,000,000, a large proportion of which was of cotton. This class of importations also shows considerable fluctuations according to conditions of prosperity or otherwise, though the fluctuations are not as great as in the case of diamonds. The value of cotton laces, embroideries, etc., imported in the fiscal year 1893 was $12,750,000
and dropped in 1894 to $8,000,000.

Again in the 1907-08 period of depression
the value of importations of this class dropped from $39,750,000 in the fiscal year 1907 to $33,750,000 in 1908, returning to $34,333,000 in 1909 and $36,750,000 in 1910.

"Among the articles of importation
in 1910 which are usually classed as luxuries are: Silk laces, $4,500,000;
laces of flax and other similar fibers,
$4,000,000; tobacco, cigars, etc., $32,
000,000; furs and fur skins, $25,000, 000; art works, $21,000,000; spirits,
wines and liquors, $20,000,000; feathers
and flowers, natural and artificial, $11,000,000; toys, $8,000,000; multi-any, $3,500,000; jewelry, $2,000,000;
manufactures of gold and silver, $2, 000,000; and beads and ornaments,
perfumeries, cosmetics, shells, orchids,
pipes and smokers' articles, and musical instruments in various sums between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 each."

It will be noticed that the line of luxuries listed are largely ornamental, representing in small amount the volume of money spent for American products which were bought to meet the demands of our wants rather than
of our needs.

The $300,000,000 invested last year
in automobiles contributed to the cost of living, yet no one complains of this luxury, because it gratified a want and we had the money to invest.

High prices and luxuries go hand in hand. Low prices mean idleness, reduction in wages and general depression.
It is sometimes well to let well enough alone.

The new committee on rules in the House of Representatives, has encouraged its first work. The new rule provides that all bills shall be taken before the House and read in open session. The first one on the calendar requires three days to read, and there are several thousand to follow. "Uncle Joe" Cannon might have been an unmixed evil, but he managed to dispatch business and keep the wheels in motion. If the new committee does as well, it will be obliged to adopt the Cannon methods.

The county board acted wisely in voting to establish a school for the instruction of teachers, although the state normal schools are supported for this class of work. A course of instruction at home will be appreciated
by girls who are unable to attend the normal, and will result in better teachers for the rural districts. The next reform should be better pay for teachers.

In some of the voting precincts in Adams county, Ohio, all of the men have been disfranchised for five years for selling their votes. This also disqualifies them for holding office, and the women will be obliged to do the voting and administer the laws as well.
Woman suffrage in the Buckeye state seems likely to be a necessity.

Hobble skirts are being succeeded by "tube" skirts, whatever they are,
but the difference is enough to bankrupt a garment house on State street,
Chicago. The firm was overstocked on "hobble" when the "tube" came in, and failed because unable to keep up with the procession.

Congress will devote this week to disposing of the Lorimer case, and there will be six weeks left for disturbing the country. If a tariff commission is appointed, there will be no occasion for an extra session.

The new governor of Wisconsin is said to be a good roads champion, and there is hope that the state will take advanced ground in good road building.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE PULL THAT PULLS.

"But I have no pull."
So said a young man who was advised to apply at a certain place for a job.

Such expressions—all too common in our day—show that the habit of looking for special favors has become in-wrought into the fabric of society.

Looking for a pull is not only wrong
in principle, but in most cases is fatal to success.

The clerk who presumes on the friendship of the department head to enjoy liberties denied to others or to excuse lapses for which others are disciplined will sooner or later come to the end of his rope.

The politician who fancies that because the populace throws up its hat
for him today he can be forgetful of his responsibility tomorrow will be rudely disabused.

I am thinking now of an actress
who was potted until she was spoiled.
By and by she depended too much on her pull with the public and was sent to the foot of the class.

Held the pull is the pullback.
The merchant who thinks he is so solid with his bank that he can persistently overdraw his account or
"kiss checks" will soon see his finish.

The whole system of special privileges is wrong.
Equality is of the very substance of righteousness. No one has a right to ask more than an open field and a fair chance.

And, besides—
There is a real force in the manly attitude that asks no favors. He who succeeds of himself, by himself and for himself has a sense of self respect that can never come by courting the smiles of another.

Young man, beware the special favor!
Nine times in ten there is a sting
tied to such a preference.

You are expected to return the favor.
And when it comes to trading favors, one for another, what guaranty have you that you will receive more than you give? The man who grants your concession is likely to ask of your civility two in return.

You say you have no pull?
Oh, yes, you have! You have a pull on your own strength and self will,
on your own patience and persistence,
on your own pluck and push.

And when you pull that string the other end of it is not found in the hands of some other man.
That is the pull that pulls.

western Wisconsin, is dead here today, following an injury received in a fall one week ago.

The "Sentence Cap."

A small, limp piece of black cloth is, according to ancient custom, put on the top of the judge's wig in England
before he passes sentence of death,
and is properly called the "sentence cap" or "black cap." Covering the head was a sign of mourning among the Israelites, Greeks, Romans and Anglo-Saxons, and is referred to in Samuel II, 15-30. Putting on the black cap is not a grim sign of revenge of the law, but is rather a token of sorrow, expressing the regret the judge feels at having to condemn the prisoner to death.

Wearing of the Hood.

In England the hood was not finally given up until the early part of fifteenth century. The "great velvet hat turned" worn by the mayor of London, John Welles, in 1432, is cited as a singularity by Stow, who states that previously "the coverture of men's heads was hoods, for neither cap or hat is spoken of." In point of fact there are a few earlier instances of hats being worn by nobles and even the middle classes.

In England it wasn't quite so easy, but it can be done in emergencies. The official secrets act is a pretty formidable weapon and editors have a wholesome respect for it. However, its use is never threatened except in cases of the gravest necessity. Evidently, then,
the Borkum incident was considered
very grave indeed.

The most natural conclusion is that Captain Trench and Lieut. Brandon were not spying on their own account, with a vague hope of reward or of serving their country, but that there was definite evidence to show that they were acting under official orders from the admiralty and that so exalted an individual could have been shown to have been implicated in the affair as to have created an international commotion. Why Germany should have aided the English in hush-
ing the matter up is not so clear,
though pressure from mutually friendly powers might have been responsible for it.

It may be only a coincidence that Secretary of the Navy McKenny bears
the name of Reginald, or "Reggie."

It will be remembered that when Capt. Bernard F. Trench and Lieut.
Victor H. Brandon of the British Royal Marine Light Infantry were caught spying upon the fortifications upon the German North Sea Island of Borkum they admitted that they were after information which they expected to turn over to the English admiralty. Tried at Leipzig, they admitted this confession with the statement that the information was to have been placed in the hands of a certain high British personage referred to by Capt.
Trench simply as "Reggie".

With such a story before them it might have been supposed that the German and English newspapers would have tried to learn more. They did, but everywhere they ran up against a blank wall, and those which threatened to publish what they merely suspected received curt intimations that there would be trouble if they printed anything more than the usual official matter and ordinary mild comment.

This was effective enough in Germany, where there is a censorship.

LAID AT REST AT JOHNSTOWN TODAY

Remains of Late Harry A. Chesmore, Who Was Murdered in Duluth Last Friday, Buried Today.

This morning at ten-thirty, at the residence of his brother-in-law, O. E. Moyer, on Prospect avenue, the funeral of the late Harry A. Chesmore was held. Rev. John McKinney of Christ Episcopal church officiating, prayer and Rev. C. G. Forsythe of Rock Prairie making a few remarks. The remains were then taken to the Johnstown Center cemetery where they were interred. Three brothers of the deceased, Fred Chesmore of Rock Prairie, Bert Chesmore of Huron, S. D., and Elmer Chesmore of Johnstown, two brothers in laws, O. E. Moyer of this city, and Arthur Pratt of Johnstown, and a cousin, Carl Chesmore, were present.

HARRY A. CHESMORE

more of La Prairie, acted as pall bearer. The remains reached Johnstown Sunday morning at six o'clock from Duluth.

Harry A. Chesmore was shot and killed Friday morning last at Duluth, Minn., while in the pursuit of his duty as a policeman and arresting two youthful hold-up men who had robbed the McKay hotel of $50, holding the clerk and night porter at the point of a revolver. He had permitted his two prisoners to enter a street car and sit down where they could be warmed, when one of them, Charles Miodrowski, less than sixteen years of age, shot him twice, once in the breast and the second time in the head. He died almost instantly.

The youthful bandits were captured on Saturday afternoon at a logging camp twenty-two miles from Duluth, and were brought back for trial. Chief of Police George M. Appleby, who accompanied Fred Chesmore, a brother of the deceased, and O. E. Moyer to Duluth last Friday, saw the two prisoners in the Duluth station and talked with them. He also brought back with him the signed confession of the youthful murderers.

Neither of the boys were sixteen. Algot Johnson was but fifteen last November, and it was he who planned the hold-up of the McKay hotel. He is of Swedish parentage and gave his account of the robbery of the hotel and shooting of Chesmore almost exactly as was the story of his companion, Miodrowski, who actually shot the policeman, firing three bullets at him, two of which found lodgment. Miodrowski was fifteen last March and is of Polish parentage.

The two boys will probably receive a life sentence, but it is possible they may be hung, the laws of Minnesota giving much leeway in the matter. They can also receive forty years for the hold-up of the hotel, so it is certain their punishment will be severe. Duluth has sixty-eight policemen, who are uniformed in even skinned overcoats and wear stars on the outside of the coat and cap during the winter. Forty of the officers accompanied the remains of their dead fellow officer to the train when the party started for Janesville, Saturday night.

Chief of Police Appleby's report of the police department for the month of December will be presented and reports are expected from the board of education and the municipal court.

FAMILY ROW ENDS IN POLICE COURT

Jack Holloran Jailed for Drunkenness After He Had Beaten Up His Father Last Night.

As the result of a family row at the Holloran home on Railroad street, in which father and son mixed it freely, Jack Holloran was brought into court this morning charged with drunkenness. Judge Field sentenced him to fifteen days in the county jail.

When officer Sam Dorn was called to the Holloran home last evening, he found things in a topsy-turvy condition. It is alleged, "Two stoves had been knocked over and both the combatants lay on the bed. Jack had attempted to show his filial affection for his parent and Michael, Jr., was badly bruised, when Michael, Jr., interfered to prevent Jack from doing further damage. He put a few finishing touches on the job. Holloran, Sr., had started and evidently completed the task most thoroughly. When Jack appeared before Judge Field today, both eyes were badly discolored and there was a lump on the left side of his jaw larger than a hen's egg. His hands quivered from the effects of his debauch.

Four others were brought into court at the same time on the drunkenness charge. Harry Rice, who was before the judge a few days ago and had promised to go to Beloit explained his failure to do so by saying he had got a better job handling bananas. He was given ten days in the county jail. Merton Simmons, whose name is on the blacklist, claimed that he had been given one drink "on the side walk" and went to the county house for fifteen days. William Kelly will spend ten days as the guest of Sheriff Hanson, being unable to pay a fine of $5 and costs. Frank McDermott who had been following for some time, was given a fine of $5 and costs or the alternative of seven days in jail. He went to the county jail with the other prisoners but it was expected that his mother would be in from the country to pay his fine before the day was over.

Holloran Very Sick: Jack Holloran, who was taken to the county jail this morning, is very ill and verging on the delirium tremens. Dr. Charles Sutherland was called to attend him and a hypodermic injection was made this afternoon. It is thought Holloran, because of his hardy constitution, will recover.

BANNER BUSINESS AT THE MYERS THEATRE

Winniger Brothers Broke not only Their Own but also the House Records for Attendance.

Manager Meyers announces that the weeks' engagement of the Winniger brothers which closed Saturday evening, broke all previous records of attendance not only for the Myers Theatre but also for the Winniger brothers themselves. This popular company of players went to Chicago on Sunday to open at the Bush Temple for a month's engagement today. Another attraction that turned the crowds away when here was the Howe Moving Pictures and Mr. Myers this morning received a letter from the headquarters of this concern at Wilkes-Barre promising him March 15th and possible March 14th, two nights, for his next set of pictures which are now being shown through the east with much success. These pictures are entirely different from those shown here recently, and if the interest shown in the last exhibition is any criterion Manager Meyers will have two more capacity houses to count on.

NASHHENRY TALL PASSED AWAY ON SATURDAY

Died Suddenly at His Home After Brief Illness—Funeral Will Be Held on Tuesday at 2:30.

Henry C. Tall, manager of the City Ice company and for years prominent in the business life of Janesville, died suddenly Saturday evening at his home, 527 Cornelia street, at eight thirty o'clock after an illness of less than a week. Mr. Tall was taken suddenly ill on Friday, December 30, and had been confined to his house since then. On Friday last he seemed much improved and was up and dressed and ate his evening meal with his wife and son. He awoke Saturday morning feeling much better but at noon suffered a severe relapse. From three in the afternoon until his death he was unconscious.

Henry Tall was born in Janesville, May 14, 1859, where he grew to manhood. When but a young man he began work for John Watson in railroad construction. In January, 1887, the People's Ice company was formed, he owning a half interest in the firm. He was manager of this concern until 1896, when the People's Ice company and the Peris Ice company consolidated under the name of the City Ice company. As manager of this firm for the past sixteen years, he has through his natural business ability, energy and steadfastness, brought the business to its present successful stage.

He was married April 11, 1888, to Mamie Moore, daughter of Captain and Mrs. B. F. Moore of this city. They have one little boy eight years old, who will be deprived of a father's loving care, for Mr. Tall was a most devoted husband and father, always generous and unselfish in his home.

Even when suffering with these ailments which he had at intervals for the last three years, he never complained but bore them quietly and patiently.

His mother was a member of Court Street M. E. church and from early boyhood he has helped to support that church. From his first earnings he gave $50 in behalf of his mother toward the building of the church. In memory of her he gave one of the windows in the Carrell Memorial church when it was built.

He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, son, one sister, Mrs. Jennie Smith of Chicago, two brothers, Fred and Samuel both of this city; also many friends and business associates who hold him in the highest esteem. Mr. Tall was a man who had a host of friends in the city. A strong, outgoing character, he impressed his personality upon his work and associates. He has always led an active life and has been prominent in the growth of the city. Charitable in the extreme,

Skeleton of Archduke Johann Put on the Market.

COUSIN OF EMPEROR JOSEPH

Advertisement Printed by Illinois Man Offering to Dispose of Remains of Man Declared Officially Dead in Vienna.

"FOR SALE"—The skeleton of Archduke Johann, brother of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, the genuine, and intact, Box 46, Denver, Ill.

New York, Jan. 9.—This was an advertisement inserted in a New York paper. In response to a petition by Archduke Joseph Ferdinand of Austria, the nephew and sole heir of Archduke Nephew-Prince Salvador, known as John Orth, the latter was officially pronounced dead by the high court marshal's office in Vienna on July 9 of last year. The high court marshal decided that Archduke John Salvador had died some time between Aug. 2 and Aug. 5, 1890, when the Archduke, under his assumed name of John Orth, was master, went down in a hurricane near the little island of Nuevo Ano, off Tierra Del Fuego. Since this official pronouncement of the missing Archduke's death, no report of his being alive and well had come from any of the quarters of the world that had discovered him before.

Archduke John Salvador, who was born in 1852, was the son of Grand duke Leopold II, of Tuscany, by his second wife, Marie Antoinette of the Two Sicilies. He was the second cousin of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, and not the brother of the present ruler over the dual monarchy. Alexander von Nuker, consul general of Austria-Hungary in New York, heard the news that the "genuine and intact" skeleton of Archduke John was for sale out in Illinois without showing great concern. He laughed as he declared his belief that the imperial family in Vienna would not be bladders for the merchandise that Box 46 has put on the market. The consul general said that it was true that nobody in Austria was sure just where Archduke John Salvador died.

Archduke John first brought notice to himself outside the court when he fell in love with Ludmilla Stubel, an actress, of peasant birth, who was playing in Vienna. The Archduke realized that he could not marry the pretty actress, so finding that he was genuinely in love with her and that he preferred life with her to all that his rank offered, he renounced his titles and pretensions to succeed to the throne and in London, in 1890, he married Ludmilla Stubel. He assumed the name of John Orth.

Having once been graduated from a nautical school and holding a master's certificate the newly enfranchised John Orth decided to go into the shipping trade, and he bought the "Saint Marguerite," loaded it with cement and sailed for Buenos Ayres with his bride on board. Arriving at the South American port, John Orth discharged his cargo, let his captain go and sailed in ballast for Valparaiso, captain of his own ship. It was on July 10, 1890, that the ship sailed. Two days later its pilot was dropped with a letter from Orth to his lawyer in Vienna. That was the last authentic word that was ever heard from Archduke John.

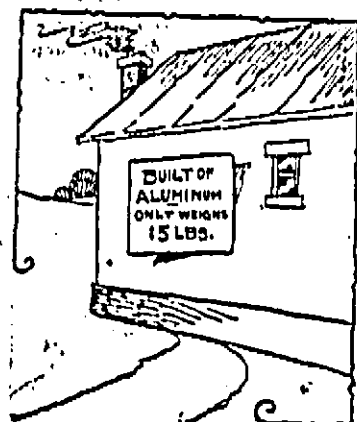

A succession of hurricanes devastated the coasts and the southern tip of the continent for almost a month. Sixty days passed and there was no sign of the "Saint Marguerite" at Valparaiso. Then Emperor Franz Joseph asked the Argentine and Chilean governments to institute a search of both coasts of the continent. It was the Argentine gunboat Bermejo that learned that a boat answering the description of John Orth's had been seen off Nuevo Ano in a three days storm that commenced on Aug. 2. Not one of the crew was ever found.

Recent developments in the royal family of Austria, according to the doctor, have made this skeleton of universal interest. Dr. Siegfried says he has entered into negotiations with interested parties in Europe, and returns to give out any further information, pending results of negotiations.

WOMAN BRUTALLY SLAIN BY THIEVES

Mrs. Minka Fine Murdered in Her Business Place.

ASSASSIN IS STILL AT LARGE

Body Horribly Mutilated by Murderer, Store Hansacked and Money She Carried on Person Missing—Officers Busy on Case.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 9.—Police of the entire state are on the lookout for the murderer of Mrs. Minka Fine, whose mutilated body was found in her little store at 4 Ambrose street. Mrs. Fine was the mother of Louis Fine, the Brown university athlete and marathon runner. Her husband died suddenly six months ago, and she had kept the store in an effort to give her boys an education.

Sergeant Higgins went to a house on Wayne street, and arrested William Norman, 38 years old, who was asleep in bed. Norman had been seen by several persons acting suspiciously on Ambrose street. One witness said he saw Norman enter the store. He was locked up as a suspicious person, but was later released.

Three weapons were used by the murderer. With some flat, but blunt instrument, probably the back of an axe, he broke the woman's jaw in three places and smashed her skull. Then, using a small pearl handled knife, he stabbed her twice. With a four-pointed instrument, something like a fork, he covered her entire body with wounds, the holes made by the weapon extending from the face to the arms and legs.

The store had been ransacked. The clothing of Mrs. Fine was torn into shreds in a search for her money. A large handbag which she carried was missing as was a roll of bills which she always kept inside her waist. The empty bag was later found behind a gasoline tank. It is not believed that the murderer secured more than $50 in cash.

Boston, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Robert H. Sayer, of Cambridge, has refused an offer of $100,000 for a famous Perugini painting of the "Madonna and Child" made by a millionaire Boston collector.

No examination and no view of the painting was allowed or requested, the person making the offer being satisfied that it was a genuine Perugini and willing to purchase at a price which he set at $100,000. Mrs. Sayer declined the offer, being not at all desirous of selling it on account of having inherited the painting.

FORAKER TALKS ON CANAL PLANS

Deals Blow to Opponents of Plan to Protect Waterway.

WRITES PRESIDENT ON SUBJECT

Ex-Ohio Senator States Purpose of Majority of Senate Was to Preserve "Unquestioned Right" to Fortify the Big Ditch.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Former United States Senator Joseph Benson Foraker of Ohio, deals the opponents of the Panama canal fortification plan a hard blow in a letter he has written to President Taft.

Mr. Foraker discloses for the first time the fact that he, then a member of the United States senate, personally suggested to Secretary of State Hay the changes in the first Hay-Paunefote treaty which resulted in the adoption of the convention now in force.

Among these changes was the elimination of the provision against the fortification of the canal. Senator Foraker discussed the proposed treaty and the changes in detail with Secretary Hay, and he declares that the purpose, not only of Secretary Hay, but of a great majority of the senate, was to preserve to the United States an "unquestioned right" to fortify the Panama canal.

"An explicit stipulation to this effect," says Senator Foraker, "was not insisted upon, because of silence on the subject itself left us free to do as we might see fit. It was because the British government thought such was the legal effect of silence that they insisted upon the express prohibition of the first treaty."

While Secretary Hay's own words leave no doubt as to his purpose in negotiating the Hay-Paunefote treaty in its final form, the testimony of Ex-Senator Foraker is so specific that the administration has accepted it with pleasure. The Foraker letter was given out at the White House.

Heavy Timbers Blown from Top of Campanile Tower in Denver Injuring Several Persons.

Denver, Jan. 9.—A gale, which reached a velocity of 75 miles an hour, performed some queer stunts in Colorado and Wyoming. In Cheyenne it tore the roof of the box car on which a brakeman was riding, and he took an aeroplane flight of half a mile, landing with a broken arm and several bruises.

A Cheyenne merchant, on his way to make a deposit, had over $200 in currency blown out of his bank book. County Judge Clark was lifted from his feet and thrown against a steel hitching post, several facial bones being smashed. Superintendent Garner, of the Colorado and Southern railway, was blown under a moving train and had one arm crushed.

Heavy timbers were blown from the top of Denver's unfinished Campanile tower, falling 350 feet, breaking a railroad man's arm, and injuring several other persons.

PLUNDER WRECKED VESSEL

Coast Thieves Steal 10,000 Bags of Coffee from Ill-Fated Ship.

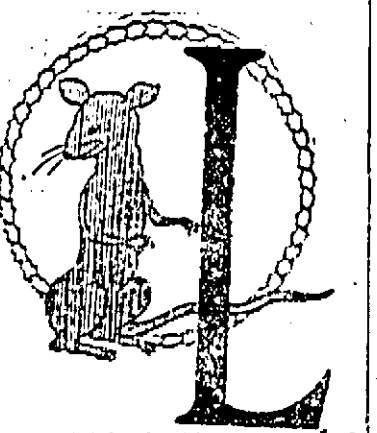

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 9.—News received here from the neighborhood of Cape San Antonio, Cuba, is to the effect that there is much trouble with the coast thieves and wreckers in connection with the cargo of the ill-fated steamship Crown Prince, which was lost in October cyclones near there. The vessel had more than 50,000 bags of coffee on board, and of this amount 10,000 bags were stolen before the Cuban coast guard reached the scene of the wrecked vessel. In that part of the country coffee sells for 40 cents a pound, and the thieves made a rich haul. Some of the stolen cargo was recovered from the homes of the fishermen.

Little Bed-Time Tales By EDITH HAVENS

The New Football

I HAVE got a little surprise for you," said Mr. Minot as he arrived home for his Saturday afternoon half holiday, and coaxed as he would, Wayland couldn't find out what it was.

All through dinner hour he begged and begged his father to tell him what the surprise was, but Mr. Minot only smiled and said, "wait until after dinner."

It seemed a long time to Wayland but finally dessert was eaten and the family arose from the table.

"Come on," said Mr. Minot as he reached for his hat and a funny square bundle on the small table on the opposite side of the room.

And Wayland very much excited grabbed his hat and followed his father out through the back door to the yard.

Down the path they walked to the barn and then Mr. Minot stopped and began to unwrap the bundle. And how Wayland shouted when he saw it was a brand new football.

How they laughed as they blew it up and when finally it was full of air and laced up tight Wayland for the first time saw how much like a great yellow egg it looked.

"Oh, let me kick it!" he shouted waving his hands above his head as if to catch it. And Mr. Minot tossed it towards him.

The ball landed—plunk—on Wayland's head and he shrieked with laughter. Mr. Minot picked it up and then he gave it a mighty kick.

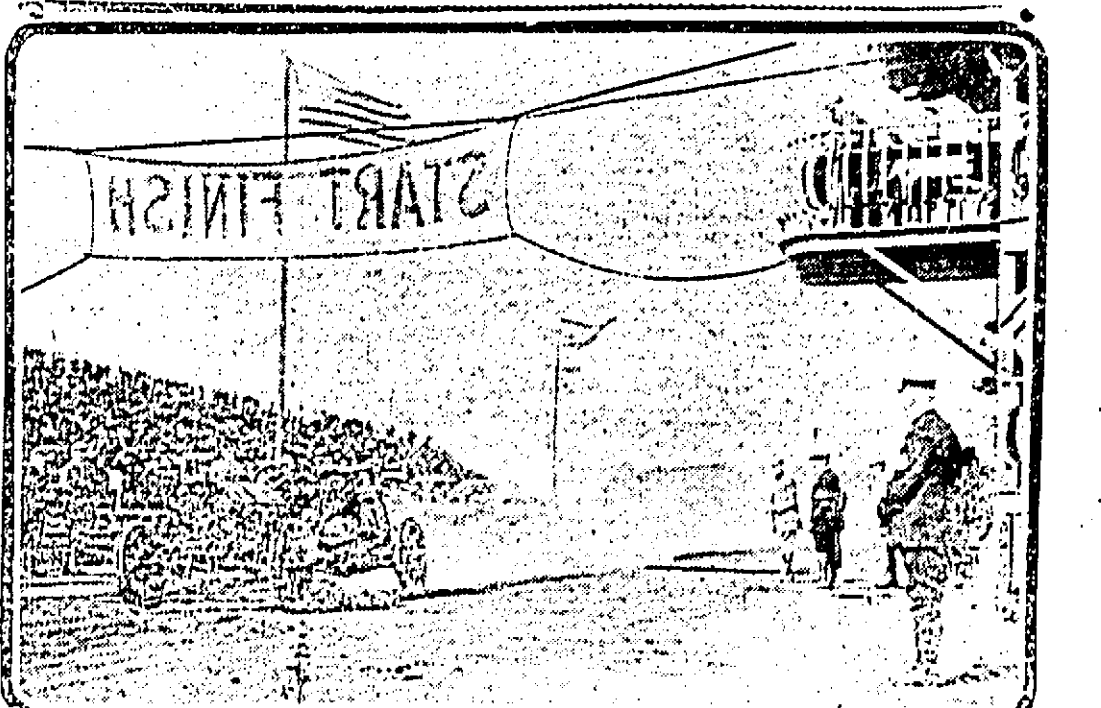

—Away it sailed high in the air and spinning over and over.

Wayland raced after it—as it landed with a bounce a short distance away. Then he started to kick it and how Mr. Minot laughed when his foot missed it and the little chap sat down, suddenly upon the ground.

But finally after trying two or three times Wayland learned how to kick the ball and then what fun he and his father had.

One time he kicked it way over the back fence.

I can't begin to tell you what splendid times Wayland had with his new gift after that and sometime, he says, after he grows up he is going to be captain of a football team.

We waste no time on splits since we find them so often false, but can place you in touch with the 144,000 immortal, Rev. J. H. WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

I HAVE received a much deserved rebuke. It was so much deserved and so much worth while that I am going to print as much of it as my space will allow today.

This was the way of it. I wrote about the spilling of a child and ended with the prophecy that "some day maybe that son will run away and marry a chorus girl or disgrace his family by stealing a few hundred thousands from some bank."

I am fully intent to tank no follow-up. It seems incredible to me, Miss Cameron, that a woman of your education and experience should consider marrying a chorus girl a disgrace and compare it in such a cold, hard way with the stealing of money. Don't you know that there are some chorus girls as pure and clean as the best of our girls? And don't you know that we have some who are by far sweeter, stronger and braver than some of our society girls?

"Believe me, Miss Cameron, some of those poor little girls work harder, longer and just as honestly for their daily bread as you and I do. Strangers in almost every city they come to, they must grope their way alone. I would like to enlighten you if I had time on just what these girls have to do. I've watched them rehearsing. I've talked with them, and I know.

"You might ask why girls take up such work. For the reason that there is no other profession in the world which educates and pays so well at the same time. Then if one really has talent the chorus work as a stepping stone to greater things. The training in the chorus is very essential. One of those girls had to support her father, mother and two little brothers out of her twenty dollars a week. She became ill, but worked on until her frail constitution was worn to the snapping point. The manager, learning of the burden this slight girl carried, very mercifully allowed her a month of complete rest, paying her salary just the same. This is just one instance of the girl who, while appearing to have such a delightful time, are really carrying heavy weights on their often cruelly tired shoulders. There are many such.

"It's true that we have chorus girls of the other class. But we have girls with immortal tendencies in every walk of life—yours and mine. There may be much immorality on the stage, but one doesn't have to follow the crowd, by the way. Those who are strong and brave and true, as many are, survive and sometimes realize their fondest dreams. The early training in the chorus plays a part but very sweet accompaniment in the symphony of memories. Masegni says, 'How flat and uninteresting would be the retrospect if there were no shadows to bring out the high lights.'

"Many, very many of our most famous actresses had their training in the chorus, actresses who are not only great actresses but great women. 'Anybody that works honestly, Miss Cameron, for the sake of the aim kept steadily in view, that person deserves the respect of God and man and it doesn't matter what the occupation is. Sometimes a word goes very, very deep. How many of us are cut by that cruel knife—the tongue. How many of us through a little prejudice condemn all as you have done, Miss Cameron, simply because you do not understand.'

"Dear 'Reader,' as she simply signs herself—I stand corrected. It is one of my beliefs, as it is yours, that so long as the man or woman is good, the occupation does not matter, provided, of course, it is honest work. And I also realize fully that those who keep high ideals and clean lives, under trying circumstances, deserve the more praise.

I was thinking, of course, of the gay-white-way kind of chorus girls, but I should not have made her the type of the whole profession.

I ask the pardon of those of the profession who have a right to grant it to me.

W O R D S TO THE FRIEND

Whose evil stars have urged him forth to sin.

On such a day the hospitable rite looks blank at first, and stunted courtesy shall he receive. Valiantly he feeds his hopes.

Women With the Emergency Mind. We hear so much today about being ready for the emergency whatever it is. The woman who runs her work and does not let it run her is usually ready for the unexpected when it comes, as come it will, when we are least prepared for it. It is usually the day when we have planned to have a "picked-up meal" that two or three of our most particular friends drop in.

Friends who have entertained us in good style and for whom we would like to have a meal at least eatable.

The woman with an emergency mind has an emergency closet where she keeps choice foods for just such an occasion as this. Canned fish, olives, salted crackers and dainty cakes, preserves of different kinds in such variety that a quick visit to this treasure room will result in supplies that will make an appetizing and filling meal.

This supply closet should be at once renewed, so that the next emergency will not find it depleted. The first cost may amount to quite a sum to stock such a bank account, but it will pay in the satisfaction that whatever happens, a creditable meal may be served in a few minutes. A few cans of tomatoes should be on the list for nearly everybody likes a dish of tomato soup. Of course, this closet should not be one for daily use, just for the unprepared occasions.

A most appetizing dish of salmon heated in the can, turned out on a hot platter, and around it place a mound of mashed potato, around this a thick nicely seasoned white sauce, will make a dish always enjoyed.

Fads and Fashion

New York, Jan. 8.—The numerous social functions incidental to the celebration of New Year's day, have been a welcome opportunity for the display of more or less rich and exquisitely beautiful costumes. Many of the costumes, designed by famous fashion creators in Paris, were extremely beautiful. In fact, there were so many charming creations among them, that it would be impossible to give an adequate description of more than a few, picked out at random.

One popular hostess received at her home in a charming costume, designed by Boer. It was of striking simplicity. There was nothing to break the beauty of the rich blue velvet tulle in its long, graceful lines from shoulder to knee. The soft, thin velvet was slightly draped on the figure and bands of fur gave it added dignity and richness. In the moderate décolletage was set white point. Duchess lace, which formed a delightful contrast to the velvet and the fur. The tulle fell over a skirt of white lace.

Another simple gown, worn by a pretty blonde bride at an informal tea, was of rose pink silk tulle and had Valenciennes lace banding. The lace was made out of the lace, draped over pink chiffon, and in the tulle skirt were set two rows of the tulle skirt and the other the banding one at the knee and the other several inches below. This tulle fell over a slightly trailing skirt of the tulle and, queerly enough, the tulle was not at the center of the back in the traditional manner of trains, but draped at one side of the gown.

The hostess at another fashionable New Year's function, which embodied a rather unusual feature. This was a sailor collar of hemstitched chiffon. The frock—an afternoon rather than an evening model—was built of black and white chiffon and black tulle and white tulle and upper skirt were of lace. Chiffon over white satin. Charming motifs being placed on the under layer of satin. From the hip to the knee there was an additional layer of black tulle and the foot of the frock very dark. The stiff collar of hemstitched black chiffon was broad and deep and opened in front over a V of gathered white chiffon. There was a grille and floating such of black tulle and in the front of this black tulle was tucked a Jacquemont rose, giving the only touch of color in the composition.

Charming costumes for the social functions and receptions of this month have been built almost exclusively of velvet. This material, unimpaired by the winter fashions, as far as a street wear is concerned, and these velvet affairs in general effect, skirts are straight and narrow, with perhaps a line of and narrow, and the little coats for at the bottom, and narrow in outline, but are made delightfully individual by flat trimmings of braid and embroidery and tiny rows of satin-covered buttons.

The simplicity of the winter fashions is most noticeable in street costumes, which are not a great deal trimmed, the straight, unbroken lines showing to greater advantage where the eye is not detracted by rich embroideries and other garnishings.

With all the beauty of other days and the suppleness of this season's fabrics, the brocades have come back into the fashionable realm, and are deservedly occupying first place. They are very much favored in Paris. Indeed, they are now used for the Princess slips, over which are draped tulle and veils of net, chiffon or lace.

Wonderful effects are shown in colors through which is run gold or silver thread. Tulle effects shot with beautiful colors and metallic threads are used for the newest and most effective evening wraps, which are extremely rich in effect. Brocaded velvets are very much in evidence. They are combined with tulle, lace and fur and are made into hoods, wraps, evening gowns and slippers. Perhaps the price of these beautiful materials are a trifle high, but they are wide, and one yard is certainly more effective on a gown than two of the usual trimming.

Collars, revers, bands and facings can be made of these brocades. When used on the outer garments as trimming they are very effective when worked up with beads. A green leaf here and there can be made solid by little beads, or perhaps the background of silk can be emphasized by beads that will throw velvet forms into marked relief. As things for wraps these brocades present many opportunities. They wear well and the surfaces of most of them are well covered. The colors harmonize with nearly all the shades, and the richness of a brocade lining is undeniably.

The new year has brought many new ideas in blouses, the most fascinating among them being velvet blouses. They are made to adhere rather closely to the lines of the figure. No fullness is used at the shoulder line, and generally the sleeves and bodice to be cut in one piece from the ordinary width of velvet. The sleeves are short, but can be edged with broad bands of silk, braid or perhaps fur. In nearly every case sub-cuffs or lace or net lengthen the velvet form. The yoke and collar are transparent.

Now as to trimming. The velvet blouse is very fine as a background for a military decoration. Corbs, buttons, braid in colors or in metallic shades are much in vogue. These are quite simply applied, the straight lines of loops on the front and shoulders being easily made and very stunning.

A cascade of inch lace is a touch that is elegant, especially on black velvet. Deep revers of satin, too, are in order, while Persian and Japanese embroidery enrich a blouse of velvet in a wonderful way.

Now as to sole, marquisette, chiffon and cotton voile are the favorite materials for other blouses. The lines on which these are cut are simple. Linings of silk, lace or not are inevitable and frequently the whole trimming is under the slip. Perhaps white porcelain beads are the most effective. They are applied on irregular places, and as bands to outline yokes, and the very latest is the hand application of beads in a tiny conventional design on the entire surface of the blouse.

The woman with high color rejoices in black millinery this season. The polka-dot is used again for setting off the black hat, though this season a single white polka-dot is smarter than the red.

How-shaped turbans, hand crocheted, and being shown at some of the best shops. They are made quite deep, fitting far down over the head and a turned-back brim is usually of a contrasting color.

The butterfly is the dominant novelty in this season's fashions. It is seen ornamenting stunning evening gowns, is perched airily on charming collars, or is resting lazily on hats of velvet and fur.

Marquisette is one of the most popular of the many alluring veiling fabrics now being shown, and comes in a great variety of pretty effects.

DAILY DIET HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist.

"MILK CURE" SOMETIMES INJURIOUS.

Milk contains about 25 per cent. of albumen. This proportion is needed by the calf, which must mature in about three years, but is too much for the human infant, which matures in 18 or 20 years—and hence infants' milk must be "modified" or proportioned.

But for the adult it is more than twice too much. Excess of albumen in the food is always serious, imposing a severe strain upon kidneys and liver, and tending to induce rheumatism, biliousness and general auto-intoxication. Hence, the milk cure must have a limited application. While it may be beneficial in some cases of anemia and mal-nutrition, it is often injurious, as clinical experience proves.

the high collar and the turned cuffs. The pretty finishing touches are a wonderfully clever draped turban of black velvet with chinchilla band and a scarf and muff of same fur.

He Looked the Part.

Gustav Mahler had a queer experience in Munich one day recently for which his name was partly responsible. His new symphony was being rehearsed and he took advantage of an hour's intermission to get some fresh air. "On returning to the building," says the Signale fur de Musikalische Welt, "he lost his way and tried to reach the hall through a corridor in which plasterers were at work. He cannot pass through here," he was told. "But I am Mahler," (Mahler is the German for painter). "You look it," was the unsympathetic reply of the man who blocked his way, "we are not ready for the painters yet, no run on." And the composer, realizing that argument would be useless, plunked into the labyrinth and finally reached his destination.

Bang Goes Altruism.

Because he was too soft hearted to ask his poverty-stricken landlady to buy new rugs for his room, the altruistic young man bought several small rugs and spread them over the floor. Immediately after the next sweeping day she presented a bill for the week's expenditures. Item, room rent, breakfast, laundry and beating rugs, 25 cents.

"Hullo," said the altruistic young man, "what does this mean?"

"Just what it says," she returned. "If folks must cover their floor with extra rugs they'll have to pay for beating 'em, that's all. I can't afford to do for nothing."

And from that moment altruism lost a disciple.

Rattler May Be Useful.

No doubt many uses can be found for a rattler's existence and yet when you have your gun with you and you find one within range, you kill it on principle, not that you are afraid of it biting you, but that there is a chance of it biting the next thing, human or otherwise, that comes along.

WHERE A MAN SHOULD BE POPULAR.

"He popular with your wife, young man, and your troubles will be less," said the police court judge as he looked down over his desk at the young man standing before him.

The man's wife had been his accuser. After all else had failed, she had appeared to the court in an effort to make him do what he should have done willingly from principle, if no other motive prompted him. The other-motivated judge had taken in the situation and then given the above advice.

And it was pretty good advice—advice which many another man might follow with profit.

No one on earth, not even a mother, knows a man as well as his wife does. She, better than any one else in the whole world, knows of the graces of gold in his nature, as she knows of his failings. If no other motive prompted him, the well-sighted judge had taken in the situation and then given the above advice.

Such a man not only wins the confidence of his children, but he holds the devotion of his wife to the last moment of his life. Their confidence in each other grows stronger with the increase of age and they enter into the evening of life satisfied and happy. Such a picture is not impossible, because it is in existence in every home where the husband has overcome his weaknesses and made himself thought it worth while to be popular with his wife and later to win her confidence.

LESSONS GAINED FROM OLD STORY

EXPRESSIONS OF INNER LIFE

Religion Must Appeal to the Soul and Find Outward Manifestation in Our Life Relations.

Centering his remarks around the story of the woman of Samaria, Dr. J. W. Laughlin gave a strong sermon at the Presbyterian church last evening. The text was found in the fourth chapter of John's Gospel, the nineteenth verse: "The woman said unto him: Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet." Dr. Laughlin spoke in part as follows:

"There are few narratives in the life of Christ that are so replete with suggestions of His character as the story of the meeting with the woman of Samaria at the well. Here is one of the places that we realize that Christ is a man. We know of His greatness and have heard of His miracles. We understand that He was possessed of supernatural powers, and we know from the way in which His teachings have filled the life of the human race that He had Divine inspiration. But we need to realize that Christ was a human being and was susceptible to all the infirmities of man. He, as well as you and I, became hungry, thirsty, cold, and felt the weariness and suffering of life's labors. And we need to know that the religion of Christ comes from a man who was acquainted with the temptations of men. As a man He gave us the religion we have today and it is important in following His teachings that we remember His humanity."

"So here at the well He was tired and thirsty and His conversation with the woman of Samaria came as the natural result of His human wants. It is interesting to note that the greatest of Christ's sermons were taught to single auditors, and to this strange woman He described His religion in a new way never heard of before. He spoke of the well of waters springing up from within and giving everlasting life and it was an entirely new conception of religious teaching. People, before that time, had associated their religion with the exercise of certain religious forms, building altars and offering sacrifices. And some of us today are not far beyond that; we are content with performing religious rites, making an offering, or going to church and prayer meeting, and believe when that is done we have been religious. But religion must appeal to the heart and the inner life of the individual. It is not what we see but what we feel that makes men brave, and here Jesus described religion as something that feeds the inner life. Virtue comes from the inner life, honor from the soul, and integrity from the inside. These are the outward signs which spring out from the soul indicating that the best things have been attained."

"Truly, Jesus led the woman of Samaria into conversion. He disregarded the reference to the different of their nationality and class. Caste was a thing that Christ did not recognize. He came to help all manner of men, high and low, and all that He could help. When we get the vision of men that Christ had, we will not say the best Indian is a dead Indian or that the best Chinaman is a dead Chinaman, but we will go like Morrison to bring the message that all may see the vision which we have seen. It is the vision that Christ had, that makes men go out and do things."

"We find in the Bible a mirror which reveals ourselves to ourselves. It reflects actions and deeds which are identical with the happenings in our present day life, and so we know that it is more than human document. And when Christ began to tell the woman of Samaria some of her past life she realized He was a prophet and He revealed himself to her as the Messiah. She immediately announced her discovery to the people in the city and here we find the secret of missionary work and of the aggressive Christian life. The woman saw and she went to tell what she saw. It is impossible to get the knowledge of Christ and know the joy of faith and keep it all to oneself. We can't be indifferent to the world about us if we are to reach the fullest realization of the Christian life. It is not until we have felt and saw the strength and power of Christ's teachings, that we can go out and give any effective work in the cause of the church, the Sunday school, or in the world. Let us who have heard and know it is our duty to spread abroad the knowledge we have gained."

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

Wm. A. Brady's (Ltd.) production of the farce sensation, "Baby Mine" is to be seen for a return engagement at the Myers Theatre on Monday, Jan. 23, with the same company that created such cyclones of laughter and applause as has never been heard before at the Myers Theatre. It is a wise hint to order seats early at the box office. Seat sale opens Thursday Jan. 19 at nine o'clock.

Before the Civil War there was hardly a plantation in the south but boasted a whipping post to which the helms slaves were fastened while being punished with the cruel whip. To faithfully depict the actual scenes in that part of the South with which the story deals, Manager Washburn has in his production of Steiner's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which will be the offering Monday, Jan. 9, matinee and evening, at Myers Theatre, a whipping post which was in service on a Red River plantation for many years prior to the Rebellion. Its genuineness cannot be disputed when one reads the affidavit from the former owner, which Manager Washburn always carries and a copy of which is on file in a Louisiana court of record. Special school children matinee at 3:45.

MONROE CARDINALS WIN IN FAST BASKETBALL GAME

Defeated Freeport Y. M. C. A. Team in Exciting Struggle Saturday Night—Local News.

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 8.—The Freeport Y's were given a severe beating in the armory here by the Cardinals five in a game which was fast and furious. The visitors came here in fighting trim, bent on the destruction of the local bunch, but from the start were losers except at the end of the first half when the score stood 15 to 14 in their favor. This score only added as a stimulus to the Cardinals and the score at the finish gave Monroe twenty-one points over Freeport in a score of 45 to 24. Both sides were frequently penalized for running and pushing during the progress of the game. Referee C. E. Smith, physical director of the Freeport Y. M. C. A., cautioned the audience against interfering with the free throws of the players.

It is expected the hardest game of the season will be played next Friday evening when the Central Y. M. C. A. of Chicago will be here.

Local Items.
John R. Walsh of Fulton, Ill., supreme secretary of the Myrtle Workers, was installing officer at the Myrtle Workers' Installation. Charles Goldsmith, past prefect, of Madison, Wis., was also here for the ceremonies. A program and dancing followed the business session.

The enrollment in the Monroe Business Institute for the spring term is unprecedented. Over ninety-five students are now taking courses in either shorthand or the commercial course, and so large is the attendance that extra seats have been necessarily added in order to seat them all. It is expected the enrollment will exceed one hundred within the next two weeks.

Roy Dodge arrived home Saturday evening from Freeport where he has been a patient in the Globe hospital for two weeks, following an operation for appendicitis.

Prof. C. B. Haverson has for the past week visited the schools at Beloit, Janesville, Rockford and Freeport, looking over the manual training departments and commercial branches of schools.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. JAMES VAN PATTEN

Remains Were Tenderly Laid At Rest In Maple Hill Cemetery Last Friday Afternoon.

Evansville, Jan. 8.—The funeral of Mrs. James Van Patten was held at two o'clock today afternoon in the Congregational church, conducted by Rev. D. Q. Grabbill. Mrs. V. A. Axell, Miss Fannie Pawley, Mrs. John Schell and Mrs. Walter Higham rendered the hymns and Mrs. Axell sang as a solo, "One Sweetly Solenn Thought." Many beautiful floral offerings were sent as a token of sympathy from the many friends and also by the different societies of the Congregational church of which she was a faithful member. L. Prantz, W. C. King, A. S. Baker, John Sperry, W. M. Tolles and V. C. Holmes acted as bearers, and the remains were laid to rest in Maple Hill cemetery.

Elizabeth Catherine Morgan was born in the town of Union, October 21, 1850, and was married to James B. Van Patten, November 30, 1876. During the early years of their married life they resided on the Van Patten homestead later moving to a farm in the town of Porter, but for the past twenty-two years they have lived in Evansville and during that time she has drawn to herself many warm and loving friends.

The death of Mrs. Van Patten there is removed a woman of more than ordinary kindness of disposition. She was not only a mother and a nurse in her own home but in many homes where her presence brought happiness and sunshine, for she never tired of saying kind words and doing helpful things for others.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and one son, John Van Patten; one sister, Mrs. Mary Day of this city, and the brother, Kenneth Morgan of San Antonio, Texas. Among those from out of the city who attended the funeral were Miss Ella Morgan of Cookeville, Mrs. Mary Morgan of Edgerton and John Owens of Brooklyn, Personal.

Dr. John Lemmel has recovered from his recent illness and left today to resume his practice in Albany. Paul Lemmel who has a position in the auditing office of the American Cigar Company at Madison, is home to be nursed through an attack of the measles.

Miss Ruth Bump of Hartford, Wis., and Mrs. Clarence Franklin of Union, have been paying a visit to their sister, Mrs. Bert Bullard.

Six children in the family of Charles Rowe are sick with measles, also the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Almond Libby.

Hugo Eichstedts, the fifteen year old speed wonder of Milwaukee, defeated Frank Byrne of this city, by a narrow margin in a one mile roller skating race at the West Side roller rink on Saturday evening. Young Eichstedts won with comparative ease in the previous contest, but Byrne has developed wonderfully of late, and gave the Milwaukee youth a run for his money. But for a slip when the race was about half completed, it is thought that Byrne could have won the race. A large crowd witnessed the match.

Finished Most Successful Week's Run Here With Performance Saturday Evening.

Winninger Brothers closed one of the most successful engagements ever played in Janesville with the performance Saturday evening. They have been greeted by crowded houses every night in spite of the cold weather, and at a number of the performances standing room was at a premium. The attractions Saturday, "Sammy of the Plains" in the afternoon, and "Kipper's Fortune" in the evening, were up to the usual standard of excellence. It is safe to say that this company is without a peer in its class and will continue to please large audiences wherever they fill an engagement.

SISTERS TAKE POISON

Face Mirror to Watch Their Dying Expressions.

Two Members of Prominent St. Louis Family Swallow Carbolic Acid—One Girl Dead.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 8.—Arms intertwined and facing a mirror to watch their dying expressions, Mabel and Isabella Boisseau, sisters, and members of a prominent family, drank carbolic acid in a confectionery store. Mabel died at the city hospital, and her sister, Isabella, is not expected to live. Before taking the poison one of the girls requested the proprietor to call a policeman. Not until Mabel fell off her chair writhing in pain was any attention paid to the girls. The other sister dropped to the floor a moment after Mabel collapsed.

"We are tired of living," was the last message written by the partners in the suicide pact. The despondent girls drank the poisons from soda water glasses.

VICTIM DYING IN A HOSPITAL

Doctors Say Enough Strychnine Was Placed in Dinner Pall to Kill 25 Men—Wife Denies Any Knowledge of Crime.

Pittsburg, Jan. 8.—G. M. Strobaker, superintendent of the Morton Grain and Hay company, is lying in the South Side hospital dying from strychnine poisoning. Mrs. Mary Strobaker, his wife, was locked up by the police and officers given that no one, not even cocaine, be permitted to see her. Chief of Police McQuade, whose men are at work on the case, says that the department has enough evidence to show an attempt at poisoning. That enough strychnine was placed in the food of Strobaker to kill twenty-five men is the assertion of physicians who have been called in, and the question now to be answered is who put the poison in the food. The police claim to have enough evidence to warrant the detention of Mrs. Strobaker, but they admit they are after others. Mrs. Strobaker, before being placed under arrest, asserted with some vehemence that her husband had enemies among the foreigners who worked in the elevators with him, and that some of the more spiteful had evidently put the poison in his food.

Strobaker, who lives some distance from the elevators and warehouses, and has been in the habit lately of carrying a noon day luncheon from his home. Saturday he had some jelly spread between slices of bread and after he had taken a bite from one of the slices, he laid the bread down to talk with some one. He grew violently ill and a few minutes later was in convulsions. The bread and jelly were taken to a chemist, who found strychnine in quantities sufficient to kill. Mrs. Strobaker is a handsome woman 30 years of age.

CHAPTER IX.

Waiting for Dawn.
Cadey wheeled so that he headed up into the wind and dropped, facing the girl and with his back to her retreating assassin. He had to drop almost vertically in order to avoid being blown out into the sea after he struck the ice. Even as it was, he went slithering down the glassy slope toward the water, and only managed to check his impetus by throwing himself flat on his face and clutching at a hummock which chanced to offer him a precarious hold. He had come down "all adrift," as sailors say, and his incoherent wings, powerless for flight but instinct with flapping perversity, continued a momentary struggle while he was getting them bundled into controllable shape.

But, thanks as much to luck as to skill, he presently found himself upon his feet unharmed. He at once set out, making what haste he could, across the ice toward where he had last seen the girl, shouting up the gale to her at the same time, to know if she were safe. He heard no answer, but presently made her out, dimly, only a pace or two away. He first set then, even before speaking, was to take out his pocket electric bull-eye and turn it full upon her.

"It's just to make sure you're not hurt—that I really got down here in time," he apologized. "I wish I might have saved you the terror, but it wasn't until you cried out that I knew—"

"I'm not hurt," she assured him. "I'm a little dazed, that's all—No, not with fright, with wonder. I hardly had time to be frightened. But I thought you'd come this morning, that you'd abandoned us just as you said you would. And yet, when I cried out just now, for help, it was you that I called to. . . . And then you came, out of the sky, just as I was sure you would. For I was certain, with the same certainty one has in dreams. Now, that it's over, I find myself wondering again if you are real. I'm not hurt at all."

Before he could find anything to say in answer, they heard another shot, muffled in the fog, from the direction of the Aurora, and in prompt reply to it, another volley.

"Wasn't there firing before?" she asked. "Can any one be attacking the yacht? There is no one there but Tom, you know, and he's disabled. Can't we—can't I, get out there any way? The boat I came ashore in is right here."

"Without making her any answer, he carried the unwieldy bundle his wings made into the hut and left it there, then returned to her and offered her his hand.

"We'll go down and look for your boat," he said.

Along the water's edge they searched, aided by the little beam from his bull's-eye, the sound of intermittent firing from the yacht urging haste all the while. But it did not take long to force the conviction upon them that the boat was gone. How an drift, most likely, was Cadey's explanation. He felt her trembling. Whether with cold or dread, he did not know, but he took her arm and steadied her with the pressure of his own.

"Come back to the hut," he said. "The situation isn't as bad as you think. I'll tell you when we get to shelter where we can talk."

She turned obediently, and bronsted the icy slope with him. Neither spoke again until they were safe in the lee of the hut. Then he said:

"I don't think Panahaw is alone there on the yacht. The relief party had the first party from the Aurora got together some time this afternoon and started back toward the shore. They should be aboard the yacht by now, though when the fog fell it put an end to my activities. The Walrus people have undoubtedly attacked them, but they shouldn't have any trouble in beating them off. They outnumber them and they are better armed. In fact, so far as I know, the Walrus people aren't armed at all. They know—you people I mean—that the yacht was likely to be attacked. I told them so myself, and then their pretended guide confessed."

"How did you know about the Walrus?" she asked curiously.

"The Portuguese was one of them; he had guided your first party down into a little valley of perpetual fog, under orders to abandon them there. When he saw me sailing about overhead—through the fog, you know—he broke down and confessed and then—well, he made a clean breast of it. He knew nothing of the details of his leader's plans; but the mere fact that he had been delegated to guide the party into a place from which it was to be expected they could never get out, was conclusive as to his intentions, at least."

He had spoken rather disconnectedly, by his sentences punctuated by the sounds of firing from the yacht. By the time he finished they were almost continuous.

"Why does it sound so much fainter than it did?" she asked. "It's not nearly so loud as that first volley we heard."

"It's a trick of the fog, very likely," he said. "Fog is a frightfully treacherous thing. It deceives men's ears as well as their eyes. There's no judging distance through it. When you cried out just now, I couldn't tell whether you were 50 feet below me or 500 feet."

"I was up above it, you see, and I didn't any way of telling how deep it was—There! Do you hear?" he went on. "The firing has stopped altogether. Your people are almost certainly safe."

"Will you let me go inside this hut," he asked, "and see if it is habitable? If it is, you'd better go in and let me make you as comfortable as I can. I don't think you need have any fears about the Walrus people. And worry wouldn't do any good any way. There's nothing we can do but wait for daylight. Nothing can happen anywhere until then."

He had, very distinctly, in mind what might happen then if the Walrus people were repulsed from the yacht. Unless they were all destroyed in the attack, they would undoubtedly make trouble as soon as morning revealed the fact that they had two hostages in their hands. But he could fight them off better from the doorway of the hut than from anywhere else. And there was no need of troubling the girl with that consideration, not for the present, at least.

"It's all right in there," she said. "I spent I don't know how many hours there reading before you came. But the candle has burned out."

The open door behind them gave access to a tiny shed, protruding from the corner of the hut and serving, evidently, as a vestibule for it. The inner door, a heavier and stronger affair, opening at right angles to it, gave access to the interior of the hut. Cadey switched on his bull's-eye and cast a brief glance about the room. There were two or three rude, slanting doors which undoubtedly opened into small, cabin-like bedrooms; but the principal part of the hut was taken up by the room in which they found themselves.

Cadey set his little bull's-eye on a shelf where they could make the most of its thin pencil of light. He then turned his attention to the door, and after a little struggle succeeded in getting it shut, and what was more, securely bolted, by means of a heavy wooden bar which dropped into an iron catch. If they were attacked with the first of the daylight, this place would afford them security until the people from the Aurora could come to their rescue. His revolver was a Colt, 45, and his belt was full of cartridges. With that weapon, he remembered that he had once been considered the best shot in the army.

The girl, when he turned to look at her, was seated on the edge of a bunk at the other side of the hut. Her pale, the traces of tears he could see in her eyes, the pathetic droop to her lips, all emphasized the thing her voice had told him already, namely, that some emotional crisis, which she had been through in those recent hours, had left her quite exhausted.

Without a word, he turned to his bundle which he had deposited in a corner of the room, and fished out from it his sheep-skin sleeping-bag. It was not until he approached her, with it across his arm, that his eye fell upon the rowedown box and the two rancorous-bound book which lay beside it. Her eyes followed him. "They're father's papers," she said. "I found the box in here. That's why I stayed. I had come ashore—"

"Wait a minute," he interrupted. He took up the book with a gentleness almost reverent, laid it in the little chest and set it down on the floor beside the bunk.

The quality of the act brought the too ready tears to her eyes, but he did not look up at her to surprise them there. "Now," he said, "I'm going to take off these boots of yours, which are wet, but which will serve excellently, nevertheless, for a pillow; and you are to take off that heavy coat and get inside this bag. Have you ever slept in one?"

He was already tugging at one of the boots, and her protest went unheeded—it was only a half-hearted protest after all.

When he had taken off the boots, she submitted, without demur, to his unfastening the frogs on her heavy seal-skin coat and slipping it off her shoulders.

When finally, with some assistance from him, she nestled down inside the great fleece-lined bag, when he had rolled her small boots into a bundle and made a pillow of them for her head, as he had said he would, she exclaimed, half-rebelloously, at the comfort of it all.

"It is so deliciously warm and soft," she said. "I didn't know you were just being a luxurious sybarite when you refused a mattress and a pair of blankets on the yacht. It only you could be warm, too, and comfortable."

"I shall be," he assured her. "I'll make a cushion of that great coat of yours and sit down here at the foot of the bunk. You're not to bother about me. You're to prove the efficacy of the sleeping-bag by going to sleep in it."

"And what will you do all the while sitting there and keeping watch? Would you—would you like to read father's journal? If you would, I'd like to have you, after what you said long ago about the men who risked and lost their lives trying to reach the pole. I think if you will read that book, you will understand, in spite of your wings. And—well, I'd like to have you understand."

He moved the bull's-eye to another part of the hut, where the light from it would not shine in her eyes, and would illuminate the pages of the book she offered him to read, while he sat, wrapped in her great coat, at the foot of the bunk.

Once as he passed by her in the completion of these arrangements, she withdrew her hand from the bag and held it out to him. "You've been very good to be," she said—"I don't mean by risking your life and plunging down into that bank of fog when you knew I was in danger. A brave man would do that, I suppose—some brave men, any way. But you've been better than that—"

He told her not to talk, but to go to sleep; and without any more words unheeded himself at her feet, drew his legs up under him, tailor-fashion, and began to read.

She saw him close the book at last and sit there, as she had sat, with it upon his knees, absorbed, reflective. Suddenly, he took up the book again, opened it and referred to the entry on that last page.

He was thinking now, not dreaming. His mind was on the active present. Before long he stole a look at her. She met his eyes.

"I'm glad father told us that the man was left-handed," she said gravely. "Because the man who killed Mr. Hunter was left-handed, too."

She had spoken the very thing his own mind had been groping for without finding, and he started and stared at her. "Why do you say that?" he demanded. "How do you know?"

"It was a left-handed stick, I took it up in my left hand and it fitted; that was when I was fetching it out of the cabin for Uncle Jerry."

"Then that was how you knew I hadn't done it?"

"No, I didn't need any proof. I knew already without that."

"Suppose I had turned out to be left-handed, too?"

"I didn't think of that. But it wouldn't have made any difference to me. When you really have faith in anybody it isn't easily shaken; not by mere circumstances, at least."

"When you really have faith," he repeated. "Yes, I suppose that's so." He pressed his hands against his temples. "But there isn't too much of that divine commodity in the world."

There was a long silence.

STUMPS MOVED VERY CHEAP

Charpit Method of Taking Out Tree Roots on Cleared Land Proving Successful.

Chehalis, Wash.—Chehalis is just now the center of an interesting experiment in land clearing. Recently through the offices of Secretary Merrill, of the Chehalis Citizens' club, an arrangement made with Harry Thompson of the United States department of agriculture, with headquarters at Seattle, and Prof. H. W. Sparks, farm demonstrator of the state college, to conduct some experiments with the charpit process of burning out stumps on logged-off lands. The work has just been completed at the farm of Henry Dupert, near Chehalis.

One hundred fir stumps, from two to four feet in diameter, were kept burning in this test, an accurate account was kept of labor. Stumps were completely destroyed, and roots burned out at an average cost of 50 cents per stump.

This voluntary work of the Citizens' club of Chehalis will, it is hoped, prove of great value to western Washington and Oregon, as it establishes the value of the charpit burning method of clearing logged-off lands. The process works most effectively on clay soil.

The method has two valuable features. First, it can be successfully conducted without the high-priced skilled labor required for the blasting powder and donkey engine process. Boys from fourteen to sixteen years of age can do the work thoroughly. They, it leaves highly fertilized seed-beds for grasses, grains, berries or other fruits, whereas blasting tears holes in the ground and lifts the hardpan to the surface.

Photographs taken on the farm of Mr. Dupert, where he has heretofore used the charpit process, show that wherever a stump was burned out there was invariably a heavier growth of grain or grass than on adjoining ground. Fruit trees planted over such a spot showed an unusual growth as compared with others.

Mr. Thompson's report will be issued later by the United States department of agriculture.

The Torpedo's "Homing Instinct"

It appears that naval torpedoes, with war heads on, have a remarkable tendency when they miss the mark, to sweep about and return to the vessel firing them. This dangerous homing instinct is likely, in the case of fleet firing, to have disastrous results.

So, Lieut. Commander Cleland Davis, U. S. N., has invented a new torpedo, which he has named the "Homing Torpedo."

The apparatus can be set so as to act when any angle of deflection from the original course has been reached. By setting it at 90 degrees, all danger of blowing up your own vessel can be avoided.

SAND CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

Wealthy Boston Man Says Spoonful of Sterilized Product Three Times a Day is a Sure Remedy.

Boston, Mass.—"Common sand, sterilized properly, is a better remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion troubles than any medicine. It is the means of digestion of many animals, so why not a man's?" says William A. Graustein, a wealthy milk dealer of Boston.

"Many years ago I used to sit at my desk, incapable of work, dopy and dull. A physician suggested that I swallow a spoonful of sand three times a day until my attacks passed away. I tried the experiment, and it worked. Within two months I was cured. Today, within ten minutes after eating a spoonful, I am capable of any work, and I think I work harder than any man in the United States."

"I have passed on the suggestion to any number of friends and the remedy has been infallible. If you suffer from inability to digest food, sterilize a handful of building sand, take a teaspoonful three times daily, and within two weeks you will be a new man."

McKeesport School Board in New Uplift Movement—Young Women Enter Night Classes.

Pittsburg.—The spirit of the uplift in this city is now directed toward women and their housekeeping abilities. The action of the domestic science committee of the schools in McKeesport the other night in establishing classes in cooking for prospective brides is expected to result in an increase in matrimonial ventures.

The committee, on application of a number of mothers with eligible daughters, announces the cooking department of the schools will be thrown open for night classes for young women, who will pay 25 cents for ten lessons.

Almost simultaneously in Pittsburg a number of women organized the housekeepers' club to carry out a plan to solve the servant girl question. A committee was appointed to devise ways and means to get good servant girls and keep them after they are captured.

Two Queer Accidents.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A pneumatic barber chair in a downtown shop blew up and put out the right eye of Frank Miller, shop porter.

While Miller was being treated at the receiving hospital, Albert Long, a waiter in a French restaurant, came in with a broken arm. He said he had stepped on a black cat's tail while carrying dinner to a patron. A heavy soup bowl fell on Long's left elbow as he sprawled on the floor, and fractured a bone.

A Use for Salt Bags.
I have found a use for the little cotton bags which salt comes in. I wash them very carefully to get the lettering out, then put them away for use as wanted. When I make poultry, as well as some kinds of meats, I make an extra lot of dressing, stuff one of these bags full, sew it up, and bake it with the rest. It makes a roll of just the right size to slice with cold meats.—Suburban Life.

Plumcot an Inferior Fruit.
The plumcot, a horticultural hybrid resulting from a cross between one of the large, tender plums and the apricot, may be of interest from the standpoint of the violence of the cross used to produce it, but it is considered by many who have sampled it, to be inferior to both its parents from a standpoint of quality and utility as a commercial fruit.—Los Angeles Herald.

Maine Stage Properties.
Miss Lucine Finch, who entertained the Fortnightly club of Bath, requested the committee to have as stage properties an old-fashioned chair, a table and candles. Her request was complied with, the chair contributed being 225 years old, the table more than a hundred years old, and the brass candlestick nearly as old as the table.—Lawiston Journal.

The Skin and Not the Blood.
Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by natural remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have, however, shown that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a proserition that would constantly cope with this disease, and after much investigation brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised, at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned by the association to sell it in Janesville.

An Ambition.

In addition to our regular ambitions some day to own two pairs of suspenders and more than one dress shirt, at this season of the year we become possessed with an itching desire some day to have one of those Arnold Dime overcoats, with the muskrat lining and the deep black curly collar. We don't know, but we have the idea that we'd present an imposing appearance on the avenue inside one of those classy fur-lined garments. Already we have 60 cents and the promise of a deer, kind old lady's fur cape when she's through with it, towards attaining our ambition, and who knows but some frosty morning we may blossom forth in all the glory of a handsome teacher or a Charley Frohman tragedian.—Detroit Free Press.

UNHEARD OF RACE

Horned Men Once Lived on Pacific Coast

Topanga Canon Yields Remains Showing Existence of Ancient World Tribe—Scientists Interested in Find.

San Francisco.—The horned men of Topanga have been discovered—that is, they were almost horned and of a physiognomy so strange that the scientists who unearthed them are almost persuaded that the existence in the long ago of a hitherto undreamed-of race of aborigines has been demonstrated.

Prof. J. R. Pendleton of the geology department of Stanford university is the explorer who has found this new field of anthropological conjecture. With a party of Stanford students he has just returned from a two months' stay in the mountains whose slopes rise from the ocean shore near Santa Monica, in Southern California.

In Topanga canon, which is in the heart of a district long known to have been the home of Indian tribes now extinct, the excavators found one mound containing the bones of 24 aborigines. Although the bones were disintegrated and broken by the centuries of erosion and geologic change that have taken place since the Indians inhabited the spot, the scientists were able to piece together something of the story of their past.

From flint arrowheads found imbedded in the skulls and from the crushed skull bones that bore every evidence of having been beaten in by war clubs, Professor Pendleton says it is plain that the ancients died in battle.

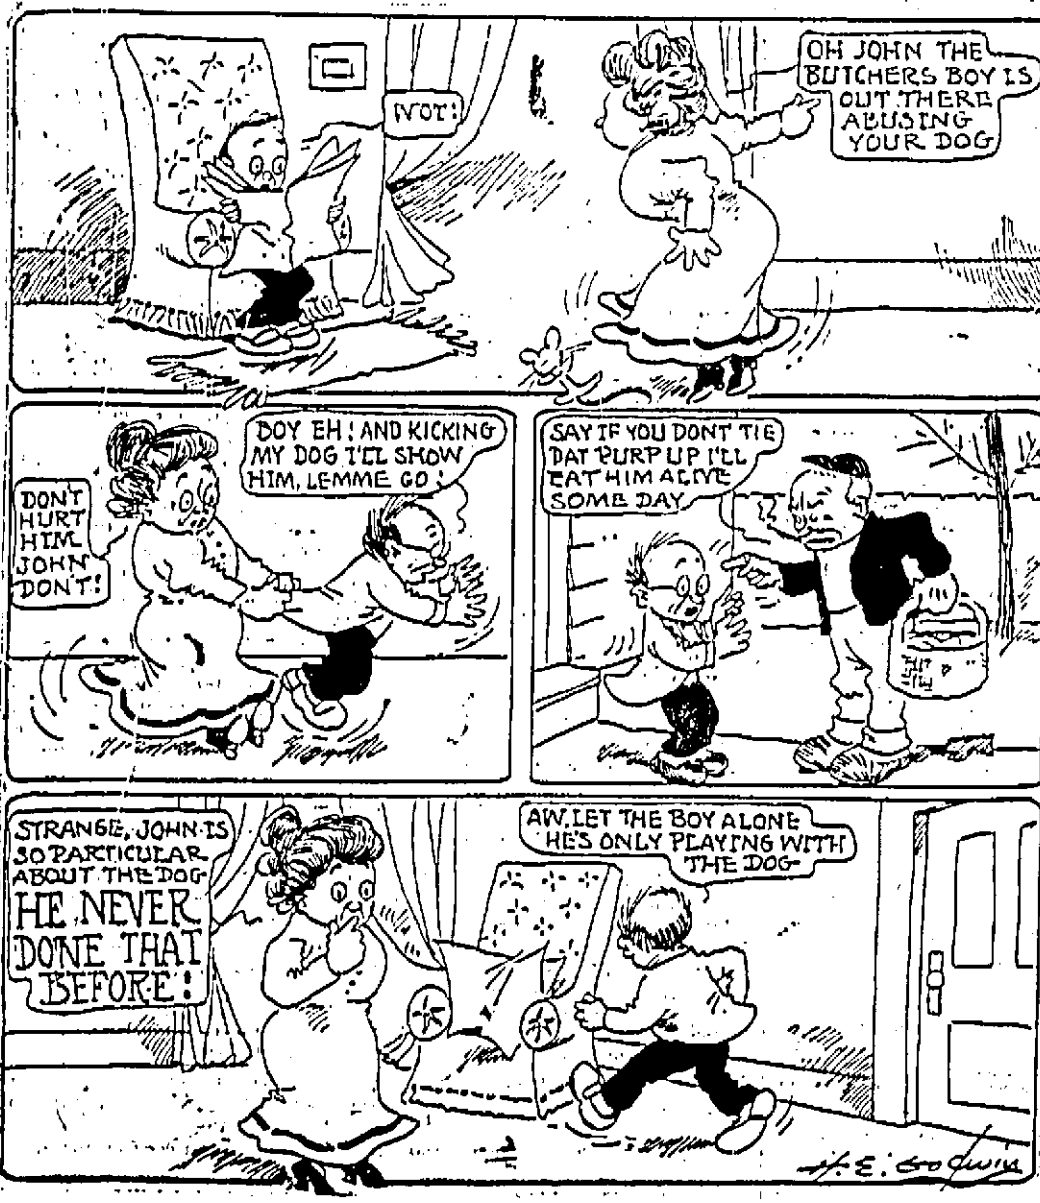

But of more scientific interest is the amazing countenance conferred by the skulls as found by the scientist. The brow is almost totally lacking, rising from the line of the eyebrows but three-quarters of an inch, and the top of the head being almost flat. Strange as it is, the nose, instead of descending in a graceful Roman or Grecian line at an angle to the forehead, projects horizontally, hornlike, and with no resemblance to the human nose. A spirit level laid from the top of the head to the tip of the nose would show but a slight inclination.

These queer tribesmen had bulging heads in the rear and unusually heavy jaw bones, due probably to their diet of clams and other shell fish, the shells of which they crushed between their teeth. In the mound of bones were discovered signs that, although they subsisted mainly on sea food, they were also hunters, the bones of deer and bear being found in the vicinity.

Professor Pendleton declares that the tribe, the site of whose village in the mouth of the Topanga canon he has unearthed, was probably descended from Asiatics who had crossed the Bering straits and drifted to the southern coast. He believes they were extremely primitive in type, the type found in the mound being of the crudest sort.

One indication that the tribes of Topanga were allied with the Indians who inhabited the channel's islands was found in the large stones cut in the form of spinning tops, which before this have been unearthed on San Clemente and Santa Catalina islands. It is believed these tops were spun and cast into the sea to charm the fish to their doom for the tribesmen's larder.

Tea in the British Embassy

Hot bread is served instead of cold sandwiches at the afternoon tea in the British embassy in Washington. Mrs. Price has set a new fashion in this respect. 'Remaining milk toast and sweet muffins are always part of the tea in the embassy. Then comes rich plum cake or golden pound cake. Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German ambassador, serves her coffee in dull chased brass on hammered brass tables. Her cups are of dull gold porcelain and all the utensils are of gold. The coffee is 'a la Turque,' that is, the grain is pulverized and a spoonful is stirred into each cup with boiling water. Then the sugar and cream are added. Cheese sticks and honey cakes are tasty with coffee, followed as they are by creamy cake. On formal occasions the countess and her daughter, Countess Alexandra, serve fruit ices in crystal punch cups.

The Pure Food Law

Secretary Wilson says: 'One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines.' The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Moritol Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use.
